I am using for my class and I have been learned new strategies to bring parents to my class. Building partnership with parents is really important for me and my coworkers.

Empowering Family-Teacher Partnerships: Building Connections Within Diverse Communities by Thomas M.

Coleman prepares students to work collaboratively with families and community professionals in support of children's early education and development. The author takes a student-centered approach to delivering substantive information and framing activities. Students are invited to develop a personal philosophy of family involvement to guide their work with families and to join a community of learners in relying upon their collective insights and problem-solving skills to address family involvement challenges.

"I am very likely to adopt this book for a course. Its informational, clear, pedagogical features are many and relevant to what students need to know."--Alice E.
