Valuable to ANY entrepreneur and business(wo)man in this fast paced ever changing world!By Steven WongWith business moving so fast and traditional sales methods and products becoming increasingly outdated what themes are still at the core of any business?Daniel Priestley's book(s) has created fantastic inspiration for me in keeping me grounded and focused on my journey as a struggling entrepreneur (read: I am "all ideas and very little implementation!"). He understands that we aren't doing it for the money, we are doing it for the creation, for the thrill of a challenge, because we love helping people, to be on the edge of seats in life and business everyday and to be ahead of the curve leading the world into a new place!This book in particular had given me so much inspiration and FLOW around who am I and what I can offer to any business. I went to his one day seminar today and have gotten further pages of notes that I'm going to implement over the next couple of weeks.It doesn't seem hard either! It's just easy! Like a key has been turned! But that's just the FLOW that has been created by this book for me.I'd say a book like this comes along once per year for me. A book that just breaks you out of your zone and takes you up to the next level. The next level is not any more harder or easier but it is a lot more simpler for you to operate and be yourself on that level.A new way of thinking for me!2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Helpful for BeginnersBy manoj adhikariI am a University of Baltimore student enrolled in the survey Entrepreneurship course and that this book was a recommended reading from my professor.Priestly makes his point that we are leaving the industrial revolution but now entering the entrepreneur revolution. In order to be successful in this new business environment, one needs to needs to build one's own business. This requires us to have a bigger thinking as a enterprise builder rather than a worker.Priestly presents ten challenges that he claims will transform the readers from industrial worker to a successful entrepreneurs building the empire. Most of these ten tasks to complete are valid and helpful.I also agree with Priestly's assertion that to be successful every entrepreneur should have luck, reputation and vitality. I also agree with his seven stage journey into the entrepreneur revolution starting from "the three levels of work" to "making a difference enterprise." In the last chapter of the book, Priestly talks about recovering humanity and love being at the core of the entrepreneur revolution, with which I totally agree.Although I find more than 90% of the book's content correct, I believe one can be a successful entrepreneur by generating some valid ideas and learning and upgrading these ideas while moving forward. I do not think one can be an empire builder by reading books and trying to follow the steps they instruct us to do. I simply do not believe the idea that all of the readers will or can do as it is said in the book by Priestly. I think to be successful, one should be lucky enough, and I believe luck is when preparations meet opportunity.This book is very useful to other entrepreneurship students who are very fresh and have no entrepreneur ideas. In general, I think about half of the students who read this book will generate business ideas. This book might be more useful to the students from fields outside of business who are interested in entrepreneurship as a side venture.4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. the style is natural and fluid. He has some controversial suggestions But that s what makes it such an interesting, rejuvenating read; rather than spouting the same old ideas, the proposed changes are revolutionary and disruptive. Just like the greatest entrepreneurs (Talk Business, April 2013) The book is superb. Straight talking. Nothing complex about technology, social media or strategy, but some very simple home truths that are very difficult to argue against This book gave me a jolt. It forced me to look at our business model, reinforced my belief in entrepreneurship and taught me a few new things all the things you want from a good book (startupdonut.co.uk, July 2013)From the Back CoverNOW IN THE AGE OF THE ENTREPRENEUR- DON'T GET LEFT BEHINDThe World is entering a new age; the age of the entrepreneur, the agile small business owner, the flexible innovator.The dinosaurs of the industrial age are being outpaced by fast-moving start-ups, ambitious small businesses and technological innovators.
